READ THIS STORY TODAY-THEN SEE IT IN MOVING PICTURES

You may see this story acted in moving pictures this afternoon or evening or any afternoon or evening within the next two weeks. Cut it out/and save it. It will be shown at your neighborhood theater sooner or later. By special arrangement with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company which converse the ten for a complete story which will be released throughout the United States and are well worth reading, whether you see the pictures or not.

versal Film Manufacturing Company, which represents the ten fore- of the picture plays produced in America. They are not hastily premost American film-producing companies, The Washington Herald pared outlines, but finished works of fiction, prepared in collaboration now offers its readers the unique opportunity of reading every morning with the scenario writers weeks before the picture plays are released,

DISCORD AND HARMONY.

The fevered ravings and the painful gaspings for breath were over at last, and the girl's lips touched the lips of the dead. Pauline pressed the lids over the glazed eyes of her dead mother and yielded to a grief too deep for tears and sobs. From the other end of the hall came the strains of mirthful music and the sounds of aughter and the clinking of glasses. It seemed so discordantly irrelevant that her mother should have died thus, with the sounds of noisy reveiry playing on ears that had always been attuned to moans of suffering, walls of hunger and sighs of

But it was over now. Pauline faced the world alone and trembling. She knew what it would be like-a mingling of music and revelry with the sobs and sighs of the famishing and the dying, just as it had been in the last few hours of her mother's life. Heart-chilling loneliness crept over her as she sat there in the darkness beside the bed. Gradually the music and the laughters trailed off into silence. She knew that old Felix, the composer, was alone. He had been kind to her, and the tottering old man who had frittered away his life in reaching for fame and success had a warm, sympathetic heart. He would understand her-and she felt if she remained longer in that dark room with its dreadful, clammy stillness she should Poor little girl!" he murmured, after Poor little girl. he murmured, are she had sobbed out her girle. His thin, trembling hands pressed hers. A mass of snow-white aair framed a face pinched by struggling and suffering. "I didn't know-and while those rascally young friends of mine were serenading me your friends of mine were serenading me your mother was—Poor child."

His tired eyes flitted over the crimson and scarlet garlands of flowers festooned about the room. "Here," beginning to gather them in his arms, "your mother shall have these, all of them. My friends brought them to celebrate the rendition of my first symphony at the opera house tonight." A touch of triumph throbbed through the solemnity of his voice. With a huge armful of flowers he led the way to the girl's room, and with loving hands a huge armini of nowers he led the way to the girl's room, and with loving hands the two heared fragrant, life-breathing masses of roses about the dead, and it seemed as if with the coming of the flow-ers the shadows of death had flitted.

The old componer led the girl to a chair. "Child," he said, "yesterday I was poor, unknown and despised. Tonight I am famous, admired and on the read to It was a bitter struggle, but I His voice quavered. "I am an old man, but I want to produce one mor great work, one more symphony, befor I die. I have no one to love or be love by. It would be so much easier if I had. wish you would let me adopt you as my laughter. Will you, child?"

Her easer young hands fumbled into his trembling and withered ones. They understood each other, the old, broken man and the woman who was but a child, each had suffered and struggled without hope. And her grief was less bitter now that love had illumined and warm-ed the dark niches of her life. The old man worked on his next symphony with the impetuosity and ardor of told Pauline, he could die happily, t in the late evenings, after he had suddenly his voice grew tender and wistful. "Yes, you are. I am getting old, but it has not escaped my eyes. It is all right, my girl—Lon Chaney is a noble young man and a gifted artist. Just the tind of war I would wish to give your.

One evening a solemn line of men went to her rom. She had disliked for rest since the time she first met him; his wily, insinuating ways had stirred ber contempt. Now she feared him, although she scarcely knew the reason for he fear, merely suspecting that Forrest, an-gered by her ill-concealed contempt would seek to do her harm.

ies in sculpture. Felix would pay his expenses and after a year or two he would return to Pauline. In the mean-

Lon also had noticed Forrest's venom ous eyes and he feared him as intensely as he loathed him. Would Pauline be safe? he wondered, and then he suggested a plan to the old man and the girl which met with the composer's em phatic and the .irl's blushing approval. After Lon had departed Felix worked with the impetuosity and ardor of feverishly upon his new composition if he could but live to finish it. Pauline surmised that he suspected what Pauline, he could die happily, she could plainly see—that the feeble ness of age was creeping into his face haid his manuscript aside, the two would and that death might check the labors sit before the fire in his library, and he would talk to her in a fatherly fashion was finished. She had noticed some thing about life's riddles. One evening he took her hands and looked at her with a solemn expression, but there was a twinkle in his dim eyes.

"You're in love, my child," he said, and one by one, they had deserted him. Pau-he said at last in a voice terribly calm.

"Allen Forrest," was the reply.
The old man sprang to his feet with surprising vigor and surveyed the group with blazing eyes. Pauline had never seen him like that, and a thrill shot through her as the old man with clencher fist faced her defamers. "You cowards—you sneaking, miserable cowards!" he cried, and his voice thundered with the passion of youth. "I shan't take the trouble to deny your slanders—I should only insult the young woman to whom you refer if I defended woman to woom you refer it detended her before you. I thought you were my friends, and you have permitted a viper like Forrest to poison your minds against a sweet, innocent girl. Now get out of my sight—all of you!"

He towered above them majestically as He towered above them majestically as they slunk from the room like so many whipped curs. After the last one had departed he brought his hand to his forehead and recled. He would have fallen had not Pauline ran to his assist-

"It was splendid of you!" she cried as she led him to his room. "I can never thank you." She noticed with alarm the pallor that had crept into his face. He was again the old broken man in whom the last passion of life had flamed, fluttered, and died out.
"My symphony!" he murmured. And then, in a voice already choked with the husk of death, "I finished it!" husk of death, "I finished it!"

His stiffening arm was wound about her protectingly, just as it had caressed her that bitter night when her mother lied, and then with a last departing smile at life he died in her arms.

Toward evening the friends who had deserted him filed into the room to pay their last respects. Pauline could see plainly that they explained his behavior of the previous evening in the light of the feeble-mindedness of an old man who could no more be convinced of plain facts, and she met their glances haughtily. Flowers were massed high on the bed where the dead man lay, and it reminded her of another scene and another still face. Tears misted her eyes, but as she turned away she was seized by a pair of wonderfully strong and tender arms.

"Pauline, my darling wife!" cried Lon, and crushed her to him. The others gazed at him with bewildered eyes. "Your wife-did you say your wife?"

umbled one of them.
"It's a surprise, boys," said Lon. "Just before I left for Europe Pauline and I were married. I was afraid one of you rascals would take her away from me. Why don't you congratulate me?"

But Pauline had drawn him away from the stupified group and led him into an other room. It was just as well that h did not know of the suspicions and the slanders. Love was sufficient for the

From the adjoining room came strains of music, fluttering, trembling strains that finally trailed off into silence. Some one out there had tried to play a portion of the old composer's last symphony but choking emotions had smothered the

it. The old composer's face was inscru-table and deathly pale.

"Who is your informer, if I may ask?"

"Harmony and Discord." First Time shown in city. Today, Empress, 416 5th.

—Adv.

caws. On the fourth day, as Miss Annie set off across the fields for a walk, he accompanied her, sometimes flying and ometimes walking; but keeping up his giad notes all the time. He was at length forgotten for a few minutes and then the report of a gun near at hand, followed by the scream of a bird, startled the girl. "It's the fellow with the gun, and he ran to the crow. "What-what is it." stammered the

"But I only shot a crow."

"Well, up in the city you would call him an oriole, but down here we call him had a mean streak about you."

Uncle and aunt laughed again, and Uncle Joe drawled: "If you were to come down here and set up a hospital for old crows you'd have your lands full of patients, but you wouldn't get any thanks from the farmers."

"Caw! Caw! Caw!" cried the old "Why-why-"

"Why-why-"

"Because when a man from town gets out into the country he seems possessed of a desire to destroy. He breaks down and uproots. He cripples and kills! He wants the life of the birds that sing to him-of the qualls that greet him-of the "TFRPF Hallors"

"TFRPF Hallors"

"Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulfered at this mass, to lay down their lives if necessary for the flag. The military mass over, a free rein was given to fun and frolic. The occame shams?"

"To you not recognize that the proposals are nothing but hypocritical shams."

"The military mass over, a free rein was given to fun and frolic. The occame shams."

"The military mass over, a free rein was given to fun and frolic. The occame shams."

"The military mass over, a free rein was given to fun and frolic. The occame of the unit of the proposals are nothing but hypocritical shams."

"TFRPF Hallors"

"TFRPF Hallors"

"Why thirst to kill a crow?" The young man was much embarrassed He had used up all his excuses. "Was it that you might return to town

END DANDRUFF

-At Once.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and of shamrock ever brought to this port by that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it forget! I go, sir, to do an act of entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon And Miss Annie headed for the pantry from any drug store (this is all you will proke up enough bread to satisfy need) apply it at night when retiring; use ppetite of a horse and carried it enough to moisten the scalp and rub it. The crow flew down to her feet in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your wagen shed she found an old box, and trace of it, no matter how much dandruft you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of and stuffed it with hay.

It's for the crow, ch?" queried Uncle hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky

Joe, as he came out.

"He won't be fool enough to go into that box at night. A weasel would have him in no time. If you feed him well he'll get along all right on a limb."

That old cruw had struck a soft snap and he knew it. For three days he did not go light out, but it makes it strings, straggly, dull, not go light from the house, and as a not go 100 feet from the house, and as a dry, britte, and lifeless, and everybody reward for the girl's care he tried to notices it.

it grand to shoot a crow!"
"If I had known that it was a tame

"Your excuses don't go, sir," inter-rupted the girl as she picked up the crow-and walked off.
"The devil." said the young man as he looked after her.
Royal Chadwick was known to his friends as a singular young man. He friends as a singular young man. He often did things contrary to human nature and to logic. He did so in this case. He took a few hours to atraighten out the kinks and then boidly appeared at

"It is you I came to see," he an-ounced as Miss Annie opened the door for him.

"The crow is up in the apple tree," was the reply. And I hope to see him later. Will you permit me a few words?"

He was seated in the parlor, and his first words were:

"I called to say that I was ashamed of even a crow."

"And it transpires that you couldn't with you?"

to take care of him."
"I am willing to take the trouble off his hands. I am to be down here most of the winter, and I will give that bird the Annie. "Oh I am not a brute nor a crow-killer

Royal Chadwick took charge of the

in his life."

And most of Miss Annie's replies read:
"Many thanks. Sorry I called you names months ago, dying of too much of a good thing, but the weekly reports still con-

ASQUITH GIVES FINAL ULTIMATUM TO ULSTER

Government Will Make No Further Concessions to Province, Premier Tells Unionists.

Father Corby was the best-snown chap-lain of the Irish Brigade. His memory is perpetuated in a remarkable statue on the field of Gettysburg, in memory of the stirring scene when he gave absolution, under fire, to all who fought there, Cath-CARSON REPLIES IN RAGE olic and Protestant, Federal and Confed-London, March 16.-The British govern ment will make no further concessions to the Unionists of Ulster province who object to home rule. Announcement to this effect was made today in the House of Commons by Premier Asquith. The government adheres to the progreat preparations were made for its celto attend to arranging the program and providing the means of entertaining guests with proper refreshment. The made last Monday," said the the counties in Ulster province a refe endum to say whether or not they shall be excluded from the operation of the home rule bill.

That the ministry believes the Union-

"If the proposals for the exclusion of Twenty rods away, behind a fringe of bushes, she came upon a young man by the Unionists there must be adjustments of the measure, especially of those in his hands.

The mass in Camp.

The mass with which the day's celebrated in his hands.

The mass with which the day's celebrated in his hands.

But it only shot a crow!"

But it was my crow!"

are rejected by the people in the Norm rade, the value of the full uniform the old bird began to kick. of Ireland it will be a waste of time to at their belts and wearing the full uniform the mellium and consequential form of their rank, the cavalrymen care.

Miss Annie put the bird down and watched it bop about, and then took a look at the hunter. Uncle Joe had said that the man after the old crow was a "feller." Somehow she had the impression that it was a middle-aged man. Here before her was a young man, and she knew from his bearing that he was from the city.

"No, he isn't dead," she responded, "but that is no fault of yours. Uncle Joe told me you had been trying to kill him for a week past."

"But I didn't know it was a tame crow," he protested. "Sur I didn't know it was a tame

Attorneys for the executive presented a motion to quash the indictments as soon as the court session began. The motion was based on the same defense as that made last week by William Huffman. who was tried on the same charge, convicted and sentenced to serve from three to ten years in State prison.

The trial began without the requested aid of State troops who were asked for by atterneys, who said that the police and county authorities did not furnish sufficient protection for witnesses.

SHAMROCK COMES TO PORT.

New York, March 16.-The steamer Colombia reached port today from Lon-donderry, Ireland, with the largest cargo one ship. From stem to stern cases con-taining the "little bit of green" were piled as high as safety permitted and at the pier to meet the ship were dozens of express wagons waiting to transfer the cargo to the florists on Broadway who Sacramento, March 16.-A strong north wind did more to solve the problem pre-sented by "Gen." Kelley's army of the unemployed than any human acceey has been able to accomplish. Camped on the levee across the Sacramento River fa m this city, with no protection from the wind-driven sands, the army disinte-grated rapidly, and it was estimated to-day that not more than 300 remained of the 1,500 that came to Sacramento a week ago. Hunger also had much to do with the desertions.

crow half to death? Isn't it great-isn't THE WAR DAY BY DAY Fifty Years Ago.

March 17, 1864-The Irish Brigade, Army of the Potesnac, Celebrated St. Patrick's Day in Winter Camp, Brandy Station, Va., with Races and Field Sports, Following a Military Mass-Loyalty of the Irish Soldiers.

(Written expressly for The Herald.)

Person.

During the remainder of this spring in During the remainder of the fleeting camp the brigade enjoyed the fleeting hours up to their latest moment. Thus vas spent a brief period of quiet by many a brave, exurberant spirit whose life was soon to go out in the bloody

Record of the Brigade.

But the men of the Irish Brigade were not daunted by the prospect of active service. They had been through the war and were tempered in its fire.

The first Irish Brigade, composed largely of recruits from New York City, originally enlisted for ninety days and went to the front, accompanied by the then well-known political exile, Capt. (afterward brigadier general) T. F. Meagher and a regiment of the Zouavez he had raised, all being under the com-mand of Col. Michael Corcoran. The Sixty-ninth New York Regiment of the brigade stayed on after the expiration of their term and fought at Bull Run where Col. Corcoran was taken prisoner, In August Capt. Meagher, who had distinguished himself in the battle, set himself to the task-in the absence of the drama that succeeded.

Fifty years ago today the Irish Bri- laureate of the brigade, read original gade. Army of the Potomac, celebrated St. Patrick's Day at the winter camps near Brandy Station, Va. beginning the day with a military mass. Laces and field sports followed the religious service. The celebration strikingly illustrated the devotion of the Irish soldiers alike to their racial customs and to the cause The girl inclined her head, as if to say he ought to be.

"You are entirely right in your view and I was entirely wrong. I say was, because I have reformed."

Another inclination.

"My cousins were badgering me about in camp the Irish Township and defied me to show were a crow."

It was carried to the altar and on the field of sport as reverently as it was lever carried in battle.

In the various diversions of a window were a crow."

In the various diversions of a winter in camp the Irish Brigade had borne an important part. Indeed, when fun and froile were not to be found in the camps of the Irish Brigade everything looked generally blue in the Army of the Po-the officers had visits from their wives Friends and relatives came to the camp and festivities of a harmless nature served to keep up the good spirit of the troops in the period of military inactivity. A large hall had been built for arm; purposes, which, being at the disposal of the division commander, was used for

REV. FATHER WM. CORBY, C. S. C.

From a photograph taken after the war.)

Father Corby was the best-known chap-eligious purposes by the Irish Brigade.

St. Patrick's Day was anticipated for many a day by the Irish Brigade and ebration. Officers were specially detailed bandmasters rehearsed special music, the singers in the ranks-and there were brigade remembered that they were to do honor to good St. Patrick, and to re

Mass in Camp.

to six soldiers of the Irish Brigade; jumpling in sacks, 500 yards; dancing contest. Irish reels, jigs and hornpipes. Cash prizes were awarded in each event.

erate.

original commander—to recruit not a sin-gle regiment, but a brigade, and organized three Irish regiments. The old Sixty-ninth re-enlisted and was oined by the Eighty-eighth and Sixtyecond New York Regiments, which were accepted for "three years or duration of the war." To these New York regiments were subsequently added the Twentyeighth Massachusetts Infantry, as well as Hogan's and McMahon's batteries. The brigade was ever after known as the 'Irish Brigade.' It was commanded by Brig. Gen. Thomas Francis Meagher until after the battle of Chancellorsville. It was in the First Division, Second Army orps.
When fully recruited the brigade had in its ranks about 4,000 Catholi in its ranks about 4,000 Catholics.

The brigade early distinguished itself for impetuous, persistent fighting. It was at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, taking an honored part and losing many men.

In the winter of 1863-4 many of its veterans re-enlisted and spring found the brigade with its ranks nearly as full as n the beginning.

Though many a wild spirit was num-pered in the Irish Brigade, the command always was noted for its strong devotion to spiritual matters

The six regiments had five Catholic priests as chaplains: Rev. James Dillon, C. S. C. of the Sixty-third; Rev. Thomas Ouellet, S. J., of the Sixty-minth; Rev. William Corby, C. S. C., of the Eighty-eighth; Rev. Fr. McKee, of the High Pennsylvania, who on being taken ill was replaced by Rev. Fr. McCullam, who also resistend who also resigned on account of his health. Fr. Corby was most constantly in the brigade. The dramatic scene of his giv-ing absolution to the army in the battle of Gettysburg has been recorded in hisor detrysburg has been recorded in his-tory; but the strength, encouragement and consolation which he dispensed to thousands in confession, to hundreds in their agony, to the many relatives of soldiers to whom he wrote, and even on the scaffold, when his charitable efforts to obtain pardon for some poor sold, or had failed, are things not to be revealed. many-practiced their best songs, and the dancers trained to outdo their mates in contests at his and reels.

But before all, the members of the Tomorrow - Sherman Succeeds Grant in the West.

(Copyright, 1914. Associated Literary Press.)

OPPOSES ANTI-TRUST LAWS.

New York Merchants' Association to Ask Congress to Halt.

New York, March 16.-The board of directors of the Merchants' Association, of New York, with a membership of 2,600 leading business men, adopted resolutions defendants be required to pay nenses of the two trials, which cost the government $100,000.

The men were sentenced to the Federal

TERRE HAUTE MAYOR ON TRIAL

Militia Not Sent to Protect Wit feet by the first including many women who came to share for the last time in the soldiers feet with the last with the case of Myers, who is reputed to the last with the case of Myers, who is reputed to the last with the case of Myers, who is reputed to the last with the case of Myers, who is reputed to the last with the with the case of Myers, who is reputed to the militial with the case of Myers, who is reputed to the feet all the with the case of Myers, who is reputed to the feet all the with the case of Myers, who is reputed to the militial with the

BABE AS SHOPLIFTING AID.

Philadelphia, March 16.-A woman giv-ng the name of Mrs. Josephine Snyder, ifty-six, and her daughter, Mrs. Anna Schmidt, who carried an eighteen-m old child, were arrested in a street department store today by One accident occurred during the hurdle race—a captain being thrown from tectives, who accused them of shop-his horse in a collision and slightly inhis horse in a collision and slightly injured. His horse was killed.

The intellectual powers of the officers seems approached a silk counter. Mrs. Sehmidt, they said, held the haby in one land, slipped the other hand under the lowed the sports in speeches, toasts and poetical selections. The division commander, Gen. John C. Caldwell, made a speech which was clouded a made. speech which was eloquent and patri-otic. Surgeon Laurence Reynolds, poet

Largest Morning Circulation.

There was a long conference in the old composer's library one evening, and at its close it was determined that Lon should go to Europe to pursue his stud-oung man and a gifted artist. Just the kind of man I would wish to give your heart to." Pauline blushed, but her heart throbbed icyously. She had not been aware that the old man had seen and understood. Now she was glac that he approved of the young sculptor to whom she had given her heart. Severything e'e. One evening a solemn line of men stepped difficiently into the library. They were the old friends who had deserted, the artists, the musicians and the writters. Pauline felt intuitive dread as they seated themselves about the room, and concealing herself behind a curtain she listened tremblinely. the young sculptor to whom she had given her heart. "I only wished to warn you, child," the old man continued, "there is Forrest, the rattle-brained, good-for-nothing pot-

Mervous Women + Are troubled with the "brues"—anxiety—sieepiessness—and warnings or pain and distress are sent by the nerves like flying messengers throughout body and limbs. Such feeling may or may not be accompanied by backache or headache or bearing down. The local disorders and inflammation, if there is any, should be treated with Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets. Then the yous system and the entire womanly make-up feels the tonic effect of

DR. PIERCE'S

Favorite Prescription Take this in liquid or tablet form and be a well woman! Mrs. Eva Tyler of So. Geneva St., Ithaca, N. Y., says, "I have been in a run-down condition for several years. Sofiered from nervousness and a great deal of pain at certain periods. Have taken several different medicines but found your Pavorite Prescription' has given the most relief of anything I have ever tried. Am very much better than I have been in some time. I gladly recommend this remedy to any woman in need of a tomic." Write Br. R. V. Pieres, Beffals, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pieasant Peliets regulate stomach, liver, bowels

In Girlhood Womanhood Motherhood

SONG BOOK COUPON

Six of these clipped from The Daily Herald or three daily and one Sunday coupon entitle the bearer to a choice of either of the beautiful song books described below when accompanied by the expense amount set opposite the style selected, which covers the items of the cost of packing, express from the factory, checking, clerk hire, and other necessary expense items. "SONGS THAT NEVER GROW OLD"—ILLUSTRATED

This big book contains songs of Home and Love: Patriotic, Sacred, College songs: Operatic and National songs—SEVEN complete song ks in ONE volume. Present SIX coupons to show you are a reader 79c for the beautiful heavy English cloth binding. Same contents in paper binding, 49 crass. We strongly recommend the heavy cloth binding, as it is a book that will last forever. MAIL ORDERS. Either book by parcel post, send 7c EXTRA for dis-ces within 150 miles; 10c EXTRA for distances from 150 to 300 miles; greater distances ask your postmaster amount required for 3 pounds.

Distributing points, THE HERALD SONG BOOK. on sale at the following places:

HOUSE & HERRMANN, 7th and 1 Sts, N. W.

F. G. SMITH PIANO CO., 1217 F St. N. W. ROLAND WALLACE, 928 9th St. N. W. CHAS. M. STIEFF, PIANOS, 1008-1019 F St. N. W. Mt. Pleasant Branch, 2746 14th N. W. W. B. HOLTZCLAW, 1705 Pa. Ave. N. W. ADAMS' NEWS DEPOT, 9th and G Sts. N. W. 14th and Harvard Sts.

boiler, who has been trying to make love to you. I am giad you have repulsed him. But he's just the sort of man by whom women are easily deceived. I know you will be careful. Now kiss me, child."

She kissed the old man good-night and quiring, puzzled way toward his callers Pauline could see the old composer's white and pinched face tilted in an in-quiring, puzzled way toward his callera "To put it bluntly, Felix, we have come to tell you what sort of woman you are harboring as your ward. You have been too much absorbed in your work to notice. I mean this woman Pauline and Lon Chaney." The old composer stared at the speaker ith rigid, ominous intensity.
'It began just before Lon left for Europe," continued the speaker, avoid-ing the old man's gaze. They were seen in-well, rather compromising situations. We have abundant proof. It wasn't fair to you, Felix, and we thought we ought to tell you before it was too late." Pauline felt a wild impulse to leap at he speaker's throat, but she restrained

DAILY SHORT STORY. THAT OLD BLACK CROW.

By LAURENCE ALFRED CLAY. (Copyright, 1914.) Late in the fall Miss Annie Bertran had run down from the city to Hill View to pass a week with her uncle and aunt, and there she caught her first sight of that old black crow. There was a cold wind blowing and snowflakes were wandering through the air. The crow sat on a limb of a dead apple tree and shivered and cawed. He was a disconsolate looking bird. "Uncle Ice what sort of a b was the answer.

"But I thought our birds flew south as winter was coming on."
"There are fool-birds as well as fool-There are foot-bitted as well as the people, and the crow is one of them. They'd rather hang around here and freeze to death than fly a few hundred miles. I'll bet over a score of them around here last winter keeled over with the cold. It's a wender that that old fellow pulled through."

"But didn't you let him live in one of our three barns?"

"Naw."
"And didn't you feed him?"
"Uncle John and Aunt Mary giggled at the idea, and the aunt said:
"It's only a crow, you see."
"Supposing it is only a crow. Isn't he to be pitied when he's cold and hungry?

"Do you know what he wants" "Of course I do. He wants fried oyssweetbreads, and champagne, but be darned if he gets any at this

"Uncle Joe, I shall feed that crow all

"Oh, I guess we'll feed him right until that feller shoots him. "What feller?"

cather. He'll probably keep it up till te finaly gets him."
"He probably won't do any such hing." was the indignant answer. "Let thing:" was the indignant answer, "Let me catch him shooting at the crow and I'll talk to him in a way he won't soon forget! I go, sir, to do an act of and broke up enough bread to satisfy the appetite of a horse and carried it and stuffed and gorged himself as he hunting up hammer and nails she nailed the box about five feet from the ground has shot my crow!"

Twenty rods away, behind a fringe of n his hands.

"Oh, you brute!" she shouted as she murderer.

"Oh, the meanness of it."

Just then the old bird began to kick. He had changed his mind about being a dead crow. In another minute he was flapping his wings and trying to caw. The built had grazed his head and stunned him.

"Why, he isn't dead:" said the young man as he advanced.

Miss Amile put the bird down and watched it hop about, and then took a look at the hunter. Uncle Joe had said that the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look at the man after the old crow was a look to man an an an an alou the is man does dead of their tank, the cavalrymen car, form of their rank, the cavalrymen car, was the cavalrymen car, which rattled and clinked at every moton of the feet, the infantry soldier in the president will present the views of the association to Congress. This committee is composed of Henry and the old the committee is composed of Henry and the old the committee is composed of Henry and the old the committee is composed of Henry and the old the committee is composed of Henry and the old the committee and clinked at every moton of the feet, the infantry soldier in the president will present the views of the association to Congress. This committee is composed of Henry and the regular session and the regular session at the regular session.

A special committee and clinked at every moton of the feet, the infantry soldier in the regular sessio him-of the qualls that greet him-of the hares that frisk about in their play. When you are in town do you kick every deg that passes you?"

and brag that after a week's shooting you had managed to scare a poor old "And if he is not fed and cared for after I am gone I shall never come down here again!" A SURE WAY TO

"Dunne his name, but he's stopping down to Bentiy's, Cousin, I guess, He's shot at the bird about a dozen times shot at the bird about a dozen times shot at the bird hasn't teched a Stop Falling Hair and Itching Scalp never had in his crow life before. When he could cat no more, the girl went on a tour of investigation. Under the

"And it transpires that you couldn't kill one!"

"And I am very glad that I couldn't. As for the crow, was he much hurt?"

"More scared than hurt."

"If you return to the city will he go

"Mercy, no! Mother wouldn't have him I shall make Uncle Joe promise time of his life and bring him out fat in the spring." "Then you-you-" stammered Miss

It's an incident that I very much regret, and I hope for forgiveness." When a young man-when a nice young man-says he is sorry that he shot a the crow of a nice young girl, they find a common ground, even it it is crow bird, and most of his weekly reports read:

"Your crow was never so full and happy
in his life."

that day."

The crow gave up the ghost several

Those proposals give the residents of ists finally will accept the concessions already offered, was indicated by the following part of Fremier Asquith's state-claims relative to the financial administrative sections of the proposed Irish government. These are now being worked out.

"We are not prepared with a cut and differ essentially from other masses, but the surroundings, the celebration in camp, the concreation, composed of efficers and soldiers, rank and cover all the ground. If the proposals are rejected by the people in the North rade, the officers carrying dress swords of the proposal of t nesses to Corruption Charges.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 16.—Mayor Don M. Roberts went on trial today on a charge of conspiracy to corrupt elections.

Attorneys for the man who held it; hurdle race, half mile, wheelbarrow race that contests the contests of the man who held it; hurdle race, half mile, wheelbarrow race.

were waiting to fill orders for St. WIND BREAKS UP "ARMY."

South Africa is buying bicycles again with